President's letter

Robert Good

Thanks to all who responded to my letter inviting suggestions and observations to consider in drafting a plan to guide Mary Baldwin for the next 10 years. We have received hundreds of responses! Whether you sent your thoughts by mail, e-mail, or through our Web site, I am delighted that you joined the conversation, which we've called "Composing the Future of Mary Baldwin College." Your voices could not be more important to me — and to the Strategic Planning Task Force of students, faculty and staff meeting regularly on campus in Staunton this academic year.

We are preparing a first draft of the strategic plan, based on the harmonious themes of consensus we heard throughout the responses from all parts of our Mary Baldwin family. The programmatic strategic plan will be complemented by a long-range financial plan and the development of a comprehensive master plan for our campus environment and facilities.

As I mentioned in the letter, our effort has three main underlying themes as we review where the college has been and where it might go: put students first, fund the future, and establish a national presence. In this magazine, you can learn about how we strive to put students first — and how, 130 years ago, a young woman about the age of some of our PEG students viewed her experience at what was then Augusta Female Seminary. Yes, a lot has changed since then. Yet, in the best ways, much has not. Then, as now, we put students first.

Also in this magazine is the annual report on contributions to Mary Baldwin. Funding the college's future is truly fundamental as we go about defining our future as we want it to be. We must strengthen our financial foundation, raising the overall rate of annual giving and building a bigger endowment. As our philanthropy summary shows, many of you have given to Mary Baldwin. Reunion classes have been conspicuous in their generosity. All of us associated with the college are deeply grateful. You are, indeed, funding the future.

Just one example of the need to fund our future is the Staunton campus itself. Students, current and former, stress the significance of its beauty in their decision to come to Mary Baldwin and in their enduring memories of undergraduate life. Our remarkable, historic collection of neoclassical structures requires plenty of care and tending, inside and out. Beyond routine maintenance is the need for periodic renovation, performed according to a carefully constructed master plan.

Our strategic plan will ensure that we continue to unite and enrich our entire Mary Baldwin community, and that we will enhance the personalized, transforming liberal education that promotes lifelong learning. No one knows better than you the lasting benefits of a Baldwin education. No one deserves to feel prouder.

Pamela Fox

When President Pamela Fox arrived on campus last July, one of her first priorities was to lead us through a strategic-planning process. In February, your Board of Trustees reviewed the progress of that initiative, which continues to involve every interested constituent of Mary Baldwin. We applaud each of you who has taken the time and initiative to contribute your thoughts and experience. We are tremendously impressed by the honest assessment of the present as well as the realistic and exciting vision for the future of Mary Baldwin that is evolving. We eagerly await the final recommendations of the Strategic Planning Task Force and encourage each of you to learn more about it and follow its progress at www.mbc.edu (just click on the "strategic planning" icon). Your comments, which you can submit online, are appreciated and valued.

Frank Pancake, Former Faculty and Staff Member, Dies at 87

college archives

By Dawn Medley

Frank R. Pancake's 17-year teaching and fund-raising career at Mary Baldwin College was an important part of his lifelong service to country and community.

Pancake, 87, associate professor emeritus of political science and former director of planned giving, was associated with the college from 1969 to 1986. He died September 23 of heart complications at the Staunton home he shared with his wife, Grace-George "G.G." Pancake.

A Staunton native who returned to the city to teach at Mary Baldwin after a long career in the U.S. Air Force, Pancake was remembered by the college community as a passionate teacher and a gracious friend.

"He was a political science professor who lived out the idea that politics begins at home," said MBC trustee James D. Lott, dean emeritus and professor of English emeritus, who was one of Pancake's colleagues in the early 1970s. "He was totally committed to the well-being of Staunton and its citizens," said Lott.

Pancake graduated first in his class at the Virginia Military Institute in 1938, returned in 1950 as a professor, and was quickly promoted to commandant of cadets. Later, after graduation from the National War College, he resumed active duty, highlighted by service at the Pentagon and the Panama Canal.

As a pilot, Pancake earned a Bronze Star for his service during World War II. He retired from the Air Force in 1966 as a colonel who was vice commander of Southeastern Command.

Pancake received his master's degree from George Washington University and his doctorate in foreign affairs from the University of Virginia.

As impressive as his military career was, Pancake was most familiar to many in Staunton for his civic service. He was mayor two years, a founding member and former president of Historic Staunton Foundation, an elder at First Presbyterian Church, and a trustee of the Woodrow Wilson Birthplace.

Pancake's height and military status sometimes made him imposing to students at first, Lott said. His easy sense of humor and ability to draw on his non-academic experience for lessons and examples quickly helped students warm to him, though.

Pancake was an enthusiastic tennis player and promoter. He brought in prominent officials to oversee Staunton's invitational tennis tournament, and he would hit balls with the Mary Baldwin team — ranked one of the best on the East Coast at the time.

Pancake's college work shifted to the Development Office from 1979 to 1986.

Former Mary Baldwin President Cynthia H. Tyson said the respect Pancake earned through his community service translated to respect for his work at the college. The trips Tyson made with Pancake in her first few years at the college to recruit donors convinced her of his enthusiasm and energy for raising money for the school.

After retirement, Pancake was a familiar face on campus, faithfully attending Commencement and opening ceremonies and practicing his serve on the tennis courts.

In 1987, Pancake received the college's Algernon Sydney Sullivan Non-Student Award. One student and one non-student are chosen for the award each year for their unselfish service, noble character, and spiritual qualities.

"As I talk to people who knew my father, I have been trying to figure out what made them love him so much," Pancake's son, Richard Robbins Pancake, said. "I realized that it was that, for all of his fame and experience, he was always approachable. He always had time to talk to you."

Contributions in his memory can be made to the Frank R. Pancake Memorial Fund at Mary Baldwin College.

Elizabeth Pfohl Campbell, Former Dean, Dies at 101

By Dawn Medley

Elizabeth Pfohl Campbell — former Mary Baldwin College dean, education pioneer, founder of one of the country's most respected public-television stations, and widow of a prominent civil-rights lawyer — died January 9. She was 101.

Campbell grew up in Salem, North Carolina, earning a bachelor's degree from Salem College and a master's in education from Columbia University's Teachers College before serving as Mary Baldwin's dean from 1929 to 1936. In just her mid-twenties when she started in the position, Campbell worked with Martha Stackhouse (later Grafton) to establish a student government association and wrote the first official student handbook, which included the college's Honor Code.

During her last year at Mary Baldwin, Campbell (then Pfohl) met Edmund Campbell while attending the unveiling of a portrait of his father, Mary Baldwin Board of Trustees Chair H. D. Campbell. The couple married in 1936.

The dean's courtship with Edmund Campbell, a lawyer and widower with two young children, involved letters from Staunton to Campbell in Washington, where he worked. Elaine McCarrick, acquisitions and budget coordinator for Grafton Library, said her father, Fitzhugh Elder, was often the messenger who carried the dean's letters to the train station after his dates with the Mary Baldwin student Elder later married, Genevieve Benckenstein Elder '41.

The 1936 Bluestocking was dedicated to the dean — who is also noted as the "champion stone skipper" in the volume. "Wherever she is in years to come, she will remain in our hearts as the embodiment of the thing we hold closest to us — the Mary Baldwin Spirit," the dedication reads.

In 1948, Elizabeth Campbell was elected to the Arlington school board, becoming the first woman to serve on an elected school board in Virginia. She led the board for two of her three terms. As a school board member, Campbell voted to integrate Arlington schools following the U.S. Supreme Court's 1954 ruling in Brown v. Board of Education, but her efforts were sidetracked.

During that time, her husband fought and won the case against massive resistance to racial integration of Virginia's public schools. Campbell stood by his decision, although they both knew he would likely never work again in Virginia.

Campbell began the journey toward launching WETA in Washington with an appointment to the Greater Washington Educational Television Association board in 1956. A year later, she became the president, and in 1961 WETA received its license and went on the air. Under Campbell's leadership, the station grew from low-budget beginnings to one of the most visible and important in the country.

From the station's first program, "Time for Science," in the 1950s to some of today's best-known public affairs shows such as "The NewsHour with Jim Lehrer" and "Washington Week in Review," Campbell made sure that educational public-affairs programming was front and center. Campbell remained involved with WETA until close to her death. She never accepted a paycheck during her long association with the station.

> 'Don't look backward or clutter up your life with regrets and resentments. Put into your work all that you have of interest, enthusiasm, hope, faith, determination and love.'

Campbell accumulated many honors for her public service. She was named "Washingtonian of the Year" by Washingtonian magazine in 1978, won an Emmy, and, in 1999, was named in the "First Ladies Salute First Women" by then-First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton and the National First Ladies Library.

On the WETA Web site, Campbell is quoted about her work ethic: "Don't look backward or clutter up your life with regrets and resentments. Put into your work all that you have of interest, enthusiasm, hope, faith, determination and love."

New MBC Operation To Open in South Boston

By Dawn Medley

Mary Baldwin College's latest regional offerings will be in South Boston, extending the college's presence in southern Virginia. Classes will begin this summer.

Mary Baldwin's Adult Degree Program will "fill a void" for bachelor's degree courses at the Southern Virginia Higher Education Center, said Nancy Krippel, Mary Baldwin College dean of adult and graduate studies. The center offers associate's degrees through community colleges in Danville and Southside and master's degrees from nearby Longwood University.

"There are students already enrolled at the Southern Virginia Higher Education Center who would like to continue their education there," Krippel said.

Mary Baldwin will offer undergraduate majors in history, English, sociology, psychology, religion, philosophy, and a combination of psychology and sociology to help students prepare for teacher licensure. To address the statewide teacher shortage, courses in South Boston will focus on the requirements for certification.

Students at the South Boston center will be able to take classes online or through independent or group tutorials. Students who live in the Southside region will also be eligible for tuition assistance through the Virginia Tobacco Commission.

"The selling points for our adult program are the one-on-one contact and the fact that our graduates get a true Mary Baldwin College degree," Krippel said.

Other MBC regional operations are in Roanoke, Richmond, Charlottesville, and Weyers Cave. The college has closed its Northern Virginia center to redirect resources where most effective.

For more information on MBC in South Boston, visit the Southern Virginia Higher Education Center's Web site, www.svheducation.org, or call that center at 434-572-5440, or contact ADP headquarters at Mary Baldwin at 540-887-7003 or, toll free, 1-800-822-2460.

MBC Professor Lands Federal Grant To Improve Teaching History in Schools

By Lantana Hoke '04

The two months that history professor Kenneth W. Keller spent writing a grant application have paid off in a big way. The veteran faculty member was instrumental in landing one of the most significant awards in memory, notable for its size and its connecting Mary Baldwin to area communities.

The nearly $700,000 U.S. Department of Education grant will allow high school teachers in the Shenandoah Valley to work with Mary Baldwin professors to increase their knowledge of American history and improve their teaching of it. Teachers from Staunton, Waynesboro, Roanoke and Augusta County will participate in workshops hosted by MBC faculty over three years, learning teaching skills and techniques.

Keller said the workshops will generate "enthusiastic and convincing American History teachers." He said the grant also is an opportunity for Mary Baldwin to create "dynamic linkages" with surrounding communities.

The grant is a part of a nationwide effort to improve the teaching of American history in schools. It will be used to "link together our nation's history teachers with professional historians and other experts," said U.S. Education Secretary Rod Paige. "Teachers who have a deep and vast knowledge of their subject are better able to inspire their students, to fully engage their minds, and to imbue them with a lifelong taste for learning."

Facilities on the MBC main campus and in Staunton, Roanoke, and at the George C. Marshall Museum and Library in Lexington will be used for the workshops. The program will be working with significant Virginia historical sites such as the Booker T. Washington National Monument, Thomas Jefferson's home Monticello, and the Woodrow Wilson Birthplace and the Frontier Culture Museum, both in Staunton.

The benefits extend well beyond those that the high school students and teachers will receive. Mary Baldwin's History Department will hire a new faculty member who will assist with the workshops as well as teach undergraduate classes. The department will expand its curriculum, developing new courses. MBC's Master of Arts in Teaching students will gain practical experience from the program.

Several full-time and adjunct MBC professors will take part in the workshops. Faculty from several departments, including economics, political science, art, and health care administration, will be involved in directing and teaching the workshops. Museum educators and other history professionals will also be working with Mary Baldwin.

MBC To Help Increase The Number of Teachers

Mary Baldwin College is one of two independent colleges in Virginia joining public universities in the commonwealth to smooth the way for community-college students to transfer to four-year institutions and become teachers, reducing a shortage.

For years, Mary Baldwin has worked closely with Blue Ridge and Piedmont Virginia community colleges, in particular, to advise students so that the academic credit they earn can be readily transferred to MBC and count toward teacher licensure. This approach is being expanded statewide among participating institutions that include private Virginia Union University and state-supported James Madison, George Mason, Longwood, Old Dominion, Radford, Virginia Commonwealth, and Norfolk State universities.

Because of looming retirements, the number of teachers in Virginia — as in the country — is expected to decline just as enrollments rise sharply. Urban and rural schools face the greatest shortages, as do subject areas that include math and science.

SunTrust Bank Creates Scholarship at MBC

A new scholarship funded by SunTrust Bank Foundation will offer a junior-year business major at Mary Baldwin College $5,000 over her last two years of undergraduate education.

"We wanted to help a student in our market enter a financial career after school," said Greg Godsey, SunTrust's market president for the Augusta-Rockbridge area that includes the college.

Jennifer Young, a business administration major from Natural Bridge, Virginia, will receive the first scholarship for the 2003-04 and 2004-05 school years. Young will receive $2,500 for each of her junior and senior years. Applicants must maintain a minimum 2.5 grade point average and come from the area.

SunTrust Bank has a long history of contributing to Mary Baldwin, including an annual gift for general college use and other contributions for special projects such as the new Center for the Program for the Exceptionally Gifted.

Godsey said the foundation's decision to name an individual scholarship this year was an effort to encourage students to apply for positions at SunTrust's Western Region headquarters in Roanoke and pursue work in a financial field.

Business Week Recognizes MBC, Other Colleges For Prepaid Tuition Plan

In its annual list of what it deems the best products, Business Week has praised Mary Baldwin College and other independent institutions for sponsoring what the magazine called an innovative program that guarantees set tuition rates into the future.

The Independent 529 Plan allows people to prepay tuition at current rates and secure the price for years or decades ahead at some 200 institutions. Started in September, it is the first so-called 529 plan — which refers to a section of the Internal Revenue Code — by a group of private institutions.

"Participation in the plan is a win-win for Mary Baldwin and those saving for college," said David Mowen, associate vice president for business and finance at the college. "Mary Baldwin wins through greater exposure to a large pool of potential students. Individuals saving for college win because they lock in current tuition costs, and they realize tax benefits attributable to 529 plans."

Certificates are bought for a set amount to fix tuition rates from the year of purchase until redeemed at a participating institution. They must be held for three years before used and can affect students' applications for financial aid.

Mary Baldwin is one of nine Virginia colleges and universities in the plan, which also includes institutions such as Princeton and Notre Dame. The plan is detailed at www.independent529plan.org.

Haunted Halls?

Mary Baldwin College's possible supernatural inhabitants were featured in an article in the September/October issue of Blue Ridge Country magazine. The feature included reported sightings by staff members and students.

Supervisor of Support Services Wanda Thayer listed an assortment of unusual events she attributes to a ghost she named Richard. Thayer said the image of Richard she saw looked like a soldier, and he does harmless things like misplacing documents and calculators and floating papers out of cubby holes. Students in Mary Julia Baldwin's former room in McClung Residence Hall also reported unexplainable activity.

Former students Carrie Grace Morgan '00 and Kelley Clemens '03, Associate Director of Strategic Communication Morgan Alberts Smith '99 and Security Officer Jim Jackson also contributed to the article.

MBC Magazine Wins CASE Award

Mary Baldwin College Magazine has won a Special Merit award for magazine-publishing improvement in the latest annual competition for District III (Southeast) of the national Council for Advancement and Support of Education.

MBC Student Senate Is Dressed for Success

The Mary Baldwin student Senate is dressing better these days.

The Senate has started requiring members to wear casual business or Sunday attire to meetings. In years past, senators wore "suits and their pearls," says Victoria TenBroeck, Senate president. "We want to bring back tradition and keep Senate a place of dignity and business."

The policy, in keeping with the professional environment of meetings, means senators may not wear sneakers, jeans, sweats, hats, T-shirts or flip-flops. Senators who don't comply will receive only one warning before "disciplinary action" is taken.

Mary Baldwin's Senate has long been an important aspect of student life. Its members, elected by the student body, attend meetings each Tuesday and handle a variety of campus issues, including administering a budget for student activities.

As for sanctions against sloppy senators, TenBroeck thinks the vocal warning she issued at the first Senate meeting this year will be enough.

Seniors To Do Research For Marshall Scholarship

Senior history majors Sarah Gooch and Marie Wisecup are preparing papers for competition in the George C. Marshall Undergraduate Scholarship program.

Gooch, Student Government Association president, and Wisecup, along with other students chosen from Virginia colleges and universities, received $250 from the Marshall Foundation and full use of the Marshall Research Library in Lexington for the project. The author of the winning essay will be awarded an additional $500 after presentations in May.

Gooch's paper will focus on the images of women in World War II propaganda. Wisecup's essay will explore the diplomatic impact of missionary work in China.

Scholars are asked to write about a subject involving diplomatic and military history or political affairs from 1898 to 1960 — the dates of George C. Marshall's public service. Marshall, an Army general, secretary of state, and originator of the Marshall Plan, received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1953.

Black Doll Project Celebrates Sixth Year

Students in Andrea Cornett-Scott's freshman orientation class gathered and purchased close to 200 black baby dolls to distribute to area children this winter, marking the sixth year of participation in the service project.

Cornett-Scott, dean of African-American and multicultural affairs, began the project when she started at Mary Baldwin. It has evolved into the primary service activity during the fall semester for the class of about 25. Students ask faculty and staff, church groups and family members for donations of dolls or money to purchase dolls.

The project's goal is to provide young African-American girls in the community with dolls that represent their physical characteristics as a way to encourage self-esteem. Students also experienced the difficulty of finding black dolls at local stores.

The dolls were distributed before Christmas, but for many of the women, the object was not just to give younger girls a toy. "It's about giving them something they can identify with," Shontae Alston '07, told the Staunton News Leader.

UVa Graduate Students Credit PEG for Head Start

Former PEG students Jennifer K. Wolf, Aviva Dove-Viebahn '01, and Isabelle L. Stanton '03 were highlighted in an article in the University of Virginia's Top News Daily as some of the school's youngest graduate students.

The Mary Baldwin alumnae are setting benchmarks as the youngest students at the university to win awards and instruct classes.

Wolf started in the PEG program in 1998 and transferred to UVa after three years. At 17, she was the university's youngest Harrison Undergraduate Research Award recipient for her study of infectious diseases at the molecular level. Dove-Viebahn, 20, received her master's degree in art history in 2003. Stanton, 17, and 14-year-old prodigy Gregory R. Smith are the school's first mathematics graduate students under 20.

VWIL Cadets Help Open Air and Space Museum Annex

The marching band and color guard of Mary Baldwin's Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership were the only college ensembles invited to perform at Appreciation Day December 6 for donors to the $311-million Steven F. Udvar-Hazy Center, the new extension, at Washington Dulles International Airport, of the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum.

The band played the national anthem as dignitaries, museum officials, and more than 11,000 donors looked on. The color guard, with the fife and drum from the band, presented the colors.

The huge center's display, supplementing exhibits at the museum's building on the Mall in Washington, includes the space shuttle Enterprise, a high-speed reconnaissance jet, a prototype of the Boeing 707, and the B-29 Superfortress Enola Gay, which dropped the first atomic bomb.

The platoon leader for the band is Cadet Capt. Stephanie Long; the drum major is Sgt. Mei-Ling Fye. Cadet Capt. Christine Fischer commands the color guard.

To learn more about the Stephen F. Udvar-Hazy Center, which is named after its major donor, go to www.nasm.si.edu/museum/udvarhazy/.

VWIL Students, Alumnae Run in Marathons In Ohio, Washington

To stay in top form, three students in the Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership ran in the U.S. Air Force Marathon in September and four alumnae completed the U.S. Marine Corps Marathon in October.

Class of 2006 cadets Tania Cheng, Amy Enz and Kelly Pecotte participated as a relay team in the Air Force race in Ohio. The students were joined by a fourth member, instructor Capt. Kristin Galloway from the Virginia Military Institute, and each ran a leg of the 26.2-mile course.

The marathon was a first for Cheng and Pecotte, but they plan to train to run a half-marathon next year and a full marathon the following year, Cheng said.

"Even as members of a relay team we could see that running a marathon is serious business, which is both a lot of work and a lot of fun," Pecotte said.

Class of 1999 graduates Allyson Hatfield, Kristin Ohleger, Trimble Bailey Spitzer and Kimberly Primerano completed the Marine Corps Marathon in Washington, D.C.

Alumna, Daughter Featured In The Wall Street Journal

Anne L. Janas '69 and her daughter, Sterling Fennell Eason, were profiled in a column by Wall Street Journal writer Joann S. Lublin last fall. In the weekly column "Managing Your Career," Lublin highlighted the pair's unique relationship as business mentors to each other in their careers in New York City.

Janas, vice president of magazine publishing company Hachette Fillipachi Media U.S., and Eason, a creative director at the global event-marketing agency Jack Morton Worldwide, encourage each other's professional pursuits and are close friends, the column noted.

MBC President's House Undergoes Restoration

The President's House at Mary Baldwin, a historically and architecturally significant Colonial Revival, has been updated and restored, thanks to the ongoing support of alumnae/i and others for the overdue project.

Designed and built in 1916 by Staunton's T.J. Collins & Son, the three-story house on Cannon Hill was used by the superintendents of Staunton Military Academy. Mary Baldwin acquired it in the mid-Seventies, purchasing the SMA campus after the academy closed.

Renovation included modernizing outdated bathrooms and kitchen, improving plumbing, repairing porch and roof, and installing air conditioning.

The President's House is often the setting of events for the college and the community. The Augusta Garden Club featured the dwelling and grounds as part of its Historic Garden Week Tour last year, as did Historic Staunton for its 2003 Christmas tour.

Former U.S. Olympic gymnast Dominique Dawes urged Mary Baldwin students to "be originals," not copies, during the college's seventh annual Smyth Leadership Lecture September 23.

Dawes, a recent graduate of the University of Maryland, was the first African-American to win an individual event medal in gymnastics by earning a bronze in the floor exercise in 1996. She also earned a gold medal as part of the U.S. team in 1996 and a bronze in 1992. The Silver Spring, Maryland, native used her life and humorous anecdotes to inspire students to chart individual paths.

Mural Shows Record Keeping Through the Ages

By Lantana Hoke '04

The hallway leading up to Mary Baldwin's Office of the Registrar in Wenger Hall has been treated to a makeover.

A mural by senior art major Jennifer Southerington, depicting record keeping over the centuries and incorporating some familiar faces, covers a wall along a flight of stairs. At the bottom of the stairs, a prehistoric cave-painting scene portrays the earliest documentation. The next section of the mural shows Egyptians creating hieroglyphics. As the stairs ascend, the mural progresses through time, illustrating a monastery filled with volumes and manuscripts and then the college's Grafton Library.

Jennifer Southerington with pages from her comic book

Among those shown, in the garb of much earlier times, are MBC faculty and staff, including Lewis D. Askegaard, dean of institutional research, associate dean of the college and registrar, and members of his staff: Nancy Keaton, Jan Galvin, Trudi Huffman, and Sharon Philips. Southerington also painted her advisor, Paul Ryan, associate professor of art, and other key Mary Baldwin figures, including President Pamela Fox.

Southerington is the daughter of Frank R. Southerington, professor of English and director of the college's master's program in Shakespeare studies, and Theresa K. Southerington, professor of theatre. She painted her parents — and their cat, Bailey — into the mural in the monastery scene.

The staff seems to like Southerington's work. "I think it's very creative," said Askegaard, who has the role of an Egyptian scribe. "What could be more boring than a registrar's office? We figured the mural would be just the thing to brighten it up."

Southerington has won Prophecy Magazine's first Student Graphics Novel Contest. Her work will be published by Sequent Media this spring. After graduation, Southerington plans to pursue a career in art. "I want to create comic books and do book illustrations and covers," she said.

24 Hours: Writing, Rehearsing, Performing

By Lantana Hoke '04

In Mary Baldwin's Fletcher Collins Theatre in Deming Hall on a Saturday night last fall, audience and cast alike counted down the 10 seconds to 8 p.m, when the plays produced by the University Wits' 24-Hour Theatre Project were scheduled to begin. The countdown marked the end of a busy 24 hours and the start of four original short plays put on by students in the college's Shakespeare studies master's-degree program.

The 24-Hour Theatre Project ambitiously incorporated the entire theatre production process into a single day, with four teams of writers, directors and actors. For the project, participants created scripts, learned lines and rehearsed, gathered props and costumes, and finally performed their works in the black-box theatre. The University Wits is an independent organization composed of students in the Master of Letters/Master of Fine Arts in Shakespeare and Renaissance Literature in Performance program. The members of the Wits spent the summer planning events, and the 24-Hour Theatre Project was their first production of the year.

"I think the plays were a huge success — lots of variety, funny, sensitive, smart,"said Colleen Sullivan, founder of the Wits and its artistic director. "The directing was phenomenal, the acting superb."

To judge from reactions, the audience agreed. The plays, all very different and humorous, were fun for the audience and the Wits. Between each play, while members of the cast rearranged the minimal set, actors bantered with the audience, asking both silly and serious trivia questions. Correct answers were rewarded with chocolate and coffee.

The actors, writers and directors did little to prepare other than be ready at the start of the 24 hours. However, "it took a lot of preparation on the production team's part," said Sullivan. "We worked out all of the logistics — how to choose the teams, where to stage the plays, procedures, etc."

Friday evening, the University Wits gathered to draw names out of a hat to determine roles: who would write, direct, or act. The students were then divided into four companies. The writers gathered in the Deming computer lab, and at exactly 8, began to type their scripts. They were given a 10-hour time limit and several prompts: They had to use the phrase "stewed prunes" and end their plays with a rhyming couplet. "Deming was abuzz all night as the writers typed away or paced," said Sullivan.

The plays showed a marked variety in subject and theme. Among the four was the self-examining Brilliant, a play about playwriting, which, appropriately, explored the trials of the playwright. The Jason's Jammin' Chamberpots company featured the Wits' academic advisor Frank Southerington, an MBC English professor and director of the M. Litt./MFA program, as the title character in The Good Marquis. All the plays were "bold, mature, and insightful," said Sullivan.

Sullivan said the Wits undertook the 24-Hour Theatre Project "to build and strengthen the students as a community and to challenge us in unbelievable ways." The University Wits also wanted "to prove we could do it," she said. Their goals, said Sullivan, were "to showcase the incredible talent we have, entertain, and simply to have fun and generate some good vibes!"

Eugenia Gunn's World:
Augusta Female Seminary, 1874

By William C. Pollard
Mary Baldwin College Archivist

The phone rang on a September morning. It was the kind of call that archivists dream about but seldom receive. The caller asked if Mary Baldwin College would like to have the letters her grandmother wrote to her family from Augusta Female Seminary — which became Mary Baldwin College — in 1874. My response was immediate and enthusiastic: yes! Without ceremony, Stella Davis of Albany, Georgia, presented the letters of Eugenia Belle Gunn to the college.

Eugenia Gunn was the oldest child of Mr. and Mrs. John McKenzie Gunn of Cuthbert, Georgia; she had two sisters, Leila and Gertrude (who attended August Female Seminary despite Eugenia's objection), and one brother.

Her father was a successful general merchant whose invoices proclaimed "Everything that MAN or WOMAN wishes to buy for the LIVING or the DEAD — but WHISKEY." He made regular buying trips to New York City by train and visited his daughter en route. His wife supervised the education of their four children and the running of a large antebellum mansion that was the scene of much of Cuthbert's social life.

The 30 letters written by Eugenia Gunn give us a rare personal view of life at Augusta Female Seminary. They contain references to courses studied; to fashion; to girlish delights and woes; to Jedediah Hotchkiss, Charlotte Kemper, and other faculty members; to a scandal; even to a quarrel with Mary Julia Baldwin, who oversaw the seminary at that time. The following excerpts introduce a young woman who is enthusiastic, impulsive, sensitive, and charming. Davis, now deceased, gave the college a remarkable family treasure for which we are deeply grateful.

On being content

I am just as well contented as anybody ever was in this world, so much so that the other Sunday when Mr. Baker [W.E. Baker, Presbyterian minister] mentioned in his sermon that nobody was ever satisfied with their share of worldly goods, Miss Agnes [Agnes McClung, head of the Boarding Department] told him that she always thought that too until she knew me, but she really believed that in me she had found one person perfectly contented. She said she accounted for it by the fact that I always did my duty. Quite a compliment to me. Certainly from a very unexpected source, as Miss Agnes never troubles herself to flatter anybody. (March 5)

On her birthday

Monday — seventeen today — good morning to you all. (June 1)

On church

I went to Church this morning as usual, heard a poor sermon, as usual, came home and slept all the afternoon, as usual. . . . Since writing the above I have been to Church and heard a sermon just 60 minutes long, and as I am very tired & have to get up so early in the morning I will bid you "good-night." (Feb.15)

Today it is dark, gloomy and raining. We could not go to Church this morning so Mr. Richardson [W.E. Richardson, chaplain] preached to us in Chapel. He generally preaches very good sermons, better at least than Mr. Baker's, but this morning I did not hear any of it for the rain had such a soothing effect that as soon as I got in the Chapel I laid my head on the desk and slept the whole time. I really enjoyed my nap very much and feel quite refreshed, so much so that I felt courage enough to write you a real long letter on this unwieldy sheet of paper. (April 19)

. . . went to hear a very celebrated minister preach. I did not hear him however, he talked so low no one could hear him. (May 29)

On Commencement

Really Mother I don't want you to give yourself much trouble about my raiment, for I don't care; the only thing I care much about is my Commencement dress. I do want that to be pretty. (March 5)

I dread Commencement this year very much. I'd give anything for a medal & I'm not going to get it, for I don't stand the slightest possible chance for one in any thing. What about your coming? Do you think you will? (April 29)

Eugenia Gunn

I have a great piece of news to tell you, to wit: my Commencement dresses were received last night. They are both perfectly lovely. I never saw two such pretty dresses in my life. I won't attempt to tell you how they are made. I know I would fail utterly in the attempt and beside you will see them very soon yourself. My white dress is trimmed very handsomely in lace. The blue silk is trimmed very exquisitely in the same with a bunch of daisies and forget-me-nots on each shoulder, more on the left however than on the right. . . . I never had such a nice birthday present in my life as the one I received two days before my seventeenth birthday. It was so generous and kind in Father to get me such handsome dresses. I certainly did not deserve such kindness...

If I was only going to get a medal or honors at Commencement, I might need them, but somehow I don't feel as if I deserved them. I am sure of my certificates that is one good thing. (May 31)

[Eugenia was awarded a gold medal for Improvement on Organ.]

On fashion

Miss Baldwin made us all wear our uniforms [mode-colored, or gray, Empress cloth with matching cape, black hat with black and white plumes, and black gloves] and we came away nearly melted. (February 22)

This afternoon I sat down & recovered twelve of my buttons, and put some new protector in the skirt and mended the plaits in several places where they had come untacked. Now wasn't I extraordinarily smart? (January 20)

You asked in one of your letters if white sailor waists would be worn this Summer. I am sure I don't know, not having heard anything to the contrary I suppose they will. I wish you would make me two or three white linen aprons. . . . I send you my picture. You did not ask me for it but I am conceited enough to think you want it. It is tolerable good and I hope you may like it. My hair is just long enough to friz [sic] nicely. I have only frizzed it once. I put it up at nine o'clock Thursday night & took it down early Friday morning and it is frizzed as much as it was when I first took it down. I never saw any thing stay in like it does. I think by putting it up once every two weeks I could keep it frizzed all the time but I don't intend doing it. (February 4)

You asked me something about my Spring clothes. I haven't an idea on subject not having heard anything about the Spring fashions. I don't care for anything as handsome as the grenadine you spoke of. I'd like to have my dressing as inexpensive as I can and will be satisfied with what I have, with some muslins or lawns [a very fine, thin fabric]. I would like a pretty lilac lawn. . . I haven't seen a real nicely dressed child of Gertrude's size since I have been in Staunton. (March 5)

[P]ut up a little package...& send by mail...a pair of spring gloves, one or two ruffs & some sort of a necktie. I think my uniform would be relieved by some Spring ribbons. Please put me in about five yards of black velvet. . . I want to use it for a walking hat this Spring. (March 25)

I want a fan, a parasol chain, and a parasol, any style that is fashionable. If navy blue parasols are being used I would like that color. I also need a new comb and brush. About the lace jacket Mother ordered I had rather have that than a colored one. (April 14)

When did you tell Miss Flynn [milliner] to send me my hat? I have not heard from her at all, although I wrote to her a week ago. (May 7)

I am almost melting while I am writing & the sun is streaming in. I wore my black grenadine and came near melting. This is the first pretty Sunday we have had this Spring and was really amusing to see the "dikes" [elegantly dressed students] that went from the Seminary today. There were only twenty one gray dresses and ten black and white striped silks. It almost amount (sic) to uniform. The rest of us had on either black or white. Even Miss "Jary Mulia" was out in a new silk. (May 10)

I do want you to bring my new muslin with you at Commencement. It is plenty warm for it now though I can get along very well without it. If you have time please have me a new corset cover made the size of the last. Those I had last summer are too small. I'll need a new corset too. (May 29)

On flowers

The lovely flowers you sent me were received today and oh! they are so beautiful. I think these kept better than the others, only one of the Japonicas was bruised and some of the buds are beginning to open beautifully. I could not appreciate anything more to save my life. It almost seems like a glimpse of home, and I kissed them every one, for I knew your dear hands had been on them all. I cannot thank you enough for them. They have given me so much pleasure, ten thousand times more than you will ever know unless you are away from everybody you love and who loves you, and received some precious token of love, like flowers. (February 27)

I am much obliged to you for sending the bouquet to Mrs. Russell. By the way, please fix up some flowers like you did my last ones and send them to Miss Nellie Hotchkiss [student], care Maj. Jed Hotchkiss [teacher], Staunton, VA. She would be perfectly delighted for she loves flowers better than any body I ever saw and there are so few, almost none here. It would do me as much good to see her enjoy them as to have them myself and please put a real nice bunch of violet roots in. Nellie would be so pleased. I have never seen a sweet violet in Staunton. If it is not too much trouble please send the flowers. (March 5)

On friends

All of Mrs. Hotchkiss' family send love as also Miss Kemper [Charlotte Kemper, teacher], Bettie, Callie, Janie, Mamie [students]. The latter is in a terrible humor tonight. I really feel worried about her. Sometimes I fear she is a little crazy. Bettie gave me her picture the other day & asked me to send it to you and Father with her compliments.... I also send you a picture of Callie Grieve. She is not pretty, but more so than that picture. (March 5)

Callie Grieve

Janie Austelle

I am so delighted that he [father] is coming that I can't walk straight. When I read the letter saying he was coming I commenced to cry & cried for half hour almost before I could make Janie understand what was the matter. I don't think I ever was so surprised and delighted. I believe I have gained five pounds since yesterday. I think some of the girls believe I am crazy. I can't begin to contain myself. (April 7)

On health

I am sorry that you were so uneasy about me, for I am sure that you need have no fears about me, for I do assure you that I am perfectly well, and haven't even got a cough. The Doctor gave me something which cured my cough entirely. I never felt better or merrier than I have for the last two days. (January 16)

I know we will enjoy the walk if nothing else. We have been having very warm weather but for the last two days it has been clear & cold just right to make one feel buoyant and cheerful. I certainly envy you and Mrs. Clarke [mother's friend] your horseback rides. I think one would do my whole system good though I know you won't think it needs doing good when I tell you how much I weigh. Guess how much? I know you never would guess as much as it is so I will tell you. 137 lbs avoirdupois. Ain't that a heap? I weighed yesterday with my hat, cloak and furs on. I don't think I look any larger than I did when I left home but I certainly am solid. (January 25)

I am sorry you all were troubled about my cold. It is a great deal better now in fact almost well. I think my spell of nettle rash has done me a great deal of good. I have gotten over it now and feel much better since. I have not had headache at all like I used to have it and my complexion is certainly much clearer and prettier than it was before. . . Tell Mother not to give herself any uneasiness about my changing my thick clothes for thin ones. I promise her that I won't do it until Miss Agnes says I may which will not be before May or June. (March 17)

I am perfectly well now. I haven't had "Nettle Rash" in over a week and have been improving as rapidly as I was falling off about two weeks ago. I never saw any thing do any body as much good as the tonic I have been taking has done me. (April 7)

On Hotchkiss family

Yesterday evening Miss Baldwin let me walk home with Annie Hotchkiss [student]. I got there just before their dinner. I went to dinner and enjoyed it very much. They treat me like one of their own daughters. At the dinner table we got to talking about Cook Books. Mrs. H. asked me if I had ever seen Mrs. Hill's Cook Book. I then told her how much it was used down home. She said that nobody up here used it and it had never been bought here. Said she had seen it advertised and had tried both here and in Richmond to get it, but could not. It is a very nicely bound book and one that she would appreciate. Won't you get one down home and send it to me by mail? (January 16)

Don't trouble yourself. I have no idea of "wearing out my welcome" at Mrs. H's. (March 30)

On letter writing

This is the fifth time I have written home this week and of course as nothing unusual has happened I have no news. (January16)

I was in a crowd of girls today & we got to talking about writing home. Two of them had not written in three weeks; two not in two weeks & one not in a month. Janie and I had written several times in a week. I don't see how girls can help writing home. I could not even if I wanted. Good night, with much love. (January 20)

Sunday again! And with it my accustomed letter to you. (April 19)

As I very often write home on Tuesday night I thought perhaps you might be disappointed if you did not hear from me on Friday so I sent you the "Postal." (April 29)

On Miss Baldwin

Miss Baldwin is suddenly developing a great love for birds, fish and flowers. She has five canaries, three red birds, a gold finch and a mocking bird and several gold fish. The front porch looks beautiful today with the birds, fish and flowers. Her flowers are pretty and green but are not blooming nicely yet. (February 22)

Nothing in particular has passed between Miss B. and myself. I thought you knew that I had hated her nearly all this session, and I never have anything to do with her more than I can help. I think the further apart we are the better it will be for both of us. I think she is the most whimsical person I ever saw. Christmas she allowed the girls to see gentlemen without permission from home, and now she won't let them do it with permission. Nellie Hotchkiss told Mr. Effinger [Staunton resident] what Father had said about my seeing him if Miss B. considered him a gentleman. So yesterday he wrote a most courteous note to Miss B. asking if he might call & she wrote back "The young ladies will not receive gentlemen." . . . Miss B. said today that she considered him a perfect gentleman but for reasons of her own could not let me see him. She told me that of her own accord, I would not ask her anything to save her neck. I think she is in her dotage anyhow. I guess you will think I am in a bad humor, but indeed I am not. I never was in a better, but when I get to talking about Miss B. it is hard for me to stop. (April 7)

I have just had a talk with Miss Baldwin which came very near being a real quarrel. You know when you were here she refused to let Janie go to the Hotel to dinner with us. Well this morning Mr. McIlhenny from Columbus asked Miss Baldwin to let some of his daughter's friends go to the Hotel with him. "Certainly" she said. She excused them all three from a whole day's school to go down there. I heard the girls talking about it and got just as angry as I could be at the partiality and expressed myself very freely on the [subject] to some girls standing right at Mrs. Harding's [Mary Harding, matron] door. She heard every word I said and repeated the whole thing to Miss Baldwin, who sent for me to come to her office. Perhaps she thought she would frighten me, but she certainly was "barking up the wrong stump." She told me that she was not accustomed to being called unjust or partial by her pupils, and that she would not allow such thing. The reason she did not let Janie go was because it was Sunday. If it had been any other day she would have let you take as many girls as you or I wished. She told you that she never allowed the girls to go to the Hotel. She said she had perfect confidence in you but its being Sunday was the only thing that kept her from letting Janie go & several other remarks of a like nature. I told her it was a matter of perfect indifference to me now. This time six weeks I would have left the Seminary for good any way. Six was not long. I certainly do hate Miss Baldwin. She is a monomaniac on the subject of flowers, birds and gold fish and little dogs. In addition to the birds she had when you were here she has a "Java Robin," _____ Bavarian Cardinal, Goldfinch, Parrot and several others whose names I don't know. One of the girls asked her today to have blinds put on her window & she said it was too expensive. Still she don't [sic] think anything of pay [sic] twenty or thirty dollars for a bird, a newfoundland or a terrier. I am not willing to have my sisters come here. (May 7)

On her namesake

I have worn my old black alpaca all out at the bottom, so today I thought I would take it to a woman who lives near here to fix. . . . I found that she had had an addition to her family, a daughter, now three months old. She brought in the baby & told me there was my namesake. I thought of course she was funning, so she opened the Bible & showed me where the child had been christened Eugenie Gunn. I asked her why she named the child that & she made this reply, "Because I think you are the loveliest person I ever saw, and I will be perfectly satisfied if my daughter is exactly like you, last & least I think it is a pretty name." So you see if I am way off from home I have got a namesake. Have been so much moved by a person to whom I have never given anything, except what I try to give everybody, kind words, and respectful treatment. Eugenie Gunn jr. is really the prettiest baby I ever saw and I really am obliged for I think Mrs. L____ though very poor is an honest Christian woman. (March 5)

On social life

Last night they had some tableaux and pantomimes at the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind Institution, free and all the schools were invited. Miss Baldwin took us. The entertainment was very good if it had not lasted so long. It commenced at half past eight and held on until half past one. I never got so sleepy in my life. It was after two when we got to bed and I did not feel at all like getting up at six. I never saw such a stupid looking set of girls as we have been today. I don't think Miss Baldwin will carry us any where else soon. It don't [sic] pay. We went in April and staid [sic] until May. (May 1)

On studies

I send my report. I am very much pleased with it. I don't see how it could well be better. I got the best marks in the classes on Elocution & German Exercises. I will try and explain the remark "Ranks in the First Class." About two months ago Miss Baldwin notified us that she was going to arrange the school in "Grades" according as we stood in our classes. Putting those who were perfect in all their recitations during the entire month in the first grade, those next best in the second & so on down to the fifth. Of course she does not require us to get 10 on Elocution or Exercises. If she did no one would ever get there. There are six other girls in the first grade. All the grades are arranged on a large piece of cardboard and hung in the Chapel. (January 20)

I don't know what Miss B. will do to fill Miss Kemper's place if the latter goes to China. Her brothers don't think that she has fully decided what she will do. She sends a great deal of love and says tell you that I am never any trouble to anybody. I think I can get on splendidly with the knowledge I will have of the organ after this year. Mr. Ettinger [Joel Ettinger, teacher] says I am getting on nicely. I certainly do like it. (January 25)

No doubt you will be surprised at my being up so late at night but I guess you won't be so very much so when I tell you that I am going to have my examination on Physiology tomorrow. I thought until this evening that we were going to have it Monday so have not been studying up very much on it. Of course when I found out we were going to have it tomorrow I had to study some and have just finished two thirds of the book. The other third I think I can get over in the morning as I intend to commence to study at five. I am going to have an examination on German Monday so when you get this letter you may think of me as poring over a hard, old German examination. I sincerely trust I will do myself credit on both. I don't see how anybody can stand an examination on German. (February 19, 1 a.m.)

I dreamed last night that you came tomorrow morning and I was so overjoyed to see you that I failed flat on German examination. I would not be surprised if the latter part of my dream should come to pass for really I don't think a girl in the class will distinguish herself on the examination. I have not heard from my Physiology paper yet but suppose I got through. I never was so tired in my life and I guess by the time I get out of German tomorrow I will be so tired I can't move. (February 22)

I wrote to Grandma Tuesday night and told her about the nice marks I got on my German & Physiology. Don't you think I did well? I most assuredly do. (February 26)

I have thought sometimes that I would like to spend next Summer in the Seminary and then go home for good in the Fall. I think it would do me more good than a whole year's schooling to stay & take a real heavy course of reading & music. I have read so little in my life & if I staid [sic] here I would be obliged to read for Miss B. would look over it herself. If it were not for being away from home so long I would ask to do it. The girls who stay here in Summer will not have so good a time hereafter as they have heretofore owing to a little incident which occurred here last Summer. (March 5)

On the scandal

The paper I send in the same mail with this letter gives a full account of the affair. I knew of it several days ago, but thought it too disgusting to write about so I thought I would send you a paper & let you see it there. Everybody was outraged. Poor Miss B. was mortified half to death. Just think! the creature has been married ever since last August & has been here in school with us apparently an innocent, unsophisticated Miss & all that time a married woman. I have said ever since she first came here that I thought she was a f—l and now I don't think there is any doubt whatever on that point. (March 5)

On weather

I never saw such a long warm spell this time of year in my life, or such very warm weather. It has required a great effort to keep from taking off my shirt, but every body insists that there is going to be some more winter. I never saw such a warm place as the Church was this morning. (February 22)

It snowed all day yesterday and day before. Is the deepest snow of the season and I have not seen a sleigh out today. I suppose the people think that the fun has grown monotonous there has been so much snow lately. (February 26)

I have never seen a prettier day than this. I have just gotten back from a long walk. The teachers took us out to the "Deaf, Dumb and Blind Institution" this afternoon and every thing looks so lovely and beautiful just like Spring. Yesterday it sleeted nearly all day, so you see what changeable weather we are having up here as much so as the southern changes that these Virginians regard with such dislike. (March 17)

Bill Pollard: Caretaker of MBC's Past

By George Graves

William C. Pollard, Mary Baldwin's volunteer archivist since he retired as college librarian emeritus in 1992, has a little wish list. He'd like to find a photo or other depiction of Mary Julia Baldwin, and he'd like to identify, definitively, the architect of the Administration Building, constructed in 1844 and one of the campus's oldest structures. Bill figures the building's elusive cornerstone, apparently obscured by later construction, contains the name — and more. Add the cornerstone to his list.

Don't bet against Bill Pollard. His record of learning about key pieces of the college's past and tracking them down is remarkably good. Take the large, century-old stained-glass window commemorating Miss Baldwin's achievements and displayed prominently in Grafton Library. Pollard came across a reference to the window and eventually found it — in a coal bin in the basement of the old Bailey Hall, which was later removed to make way for the new Center for the Program for the Exceptionally Gifted.

When Pollard became the college's archivist, he found that "literally, things were in attics and closets around campus." Among his other discoveries — or recoveries — are a painting, of Baldwin's dog Beauty, used as a prop in a college theatrical production, and an MBC apple crate left over from the days when the college owned an orchard that inspired Apple Day. Pollard spotted the crate at a nearby apple farm. "I knew what it was," he says. "I had seen a photograph."

When he isn't adding to the college's collection of artifacts that includes founder Rufus W. Bailey's trunk ("very nice, leather bound, brass nailed, with his initials") and Miss Baldwin's books and letters, Pollard fields all manner of questions from faculty, staff, alumnae/i, and others.

Rufus W. Bailey's trunk

"I do a lot of genealogical work," he says. "You'd be amazed at how many requests I get for names of grandmothers and great-grandmothers." He often consults student records, in longhand and going back to the 19th century. (Yes, those grades really are forever.) The search for distant relatives can be complicated; Staunton once had four schools or "seminaries" for young women, including Augusta Female Seminary, which became Mary Baldwin College.

Gracious and soft spoken, Pollard shares an office in the library with Patricia H. Menk, professor emerita of history and author of a history of the college. He's from Farmville, North Carolina, a rural community about 60 miles east of Raleigh. Pollard has an undergraduate degree in comparative literature from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and a master's degree from Florida State. Before becoming head librarian at MBC in 1977, he held similar positions at the College of William and Mary and at what was then its Norfolk branch, now Old Dominion University. Earlier in his career, he was on the library staff at the University of Georgia.

Preceding Pollard at Mary Baldwin was one of three daughters, Elizabeth Pollard Hemeter '73, who earned a law degree at the University of Virginia and is in Knoxville, Tennessee. He and his wife, Betsy, live a short walk from campus.

One of Pollard's most notable efforts came when, after hearing alarming radio reports one icy day, he quickly made his way to campus to rescue from bursting pipes dozens of boxes of records and other papers stored in the enclosed area under the porch of the Administration Building.

Pollard thinks he may have identified the Administration Building's architect, thanks to old photos and expert advice, as Thomas Blackburn, well known in his time.

As for a portrait of Mary Julia Baldwin, Pollard is not so confident. Yet, he knows that "she loved fine clothes" and was generally "described as handsome." She certainly was prominent as head of the school that eventually bore her name. Could there be an attic, basement, or closet at MBC — or possibly elsewhere — sheltering her likeness?

Sure, College Can Be Tough. It's College. But Help Is There.

By George Graves

Even for the most prepared students, those seemingly ready academically and socially for what are still referred to as the most important years in a life, college can be a big transition and usually is. Less structure, more homework, difficult homework. For residential students, that's just the beginning; for example, many students today have had the luxury of not sharing a room at home. What's more, Mary Baldwin students come from many different schools, many different backgrounds. About a fourth are the first members of their families to go to college.

Like an increasing number of colleges and universities, Mary Baldwin does more and more each year to anticipate what students need and want — and to make that assistance not only available but also inviting. That help might come first from a resident advisor, an RA.

"They were always there for you," says Gloria Celespara '04 of Silver Spring, Maryland, an Asian studies major with a minor in business administration. She was so impressed she decided to become an RA. "I decided to give back when I saw how nice people were to me."

Celespara, co-chair of resident advisors this year, now knows just how demanding life as an RA can be. Other students depend on her. "You get experience from A to Z," she says. "You meet different people. Some students need to call you 24 hours a day, seven days a week. They have access to you. They may have a roommate conflict. You have to make yourself available. You can't just say no. It can be rough. Sometimes you get really emotionally involved."

Kerrie Laughlin '05 of Graham, North Carolina, is the other RA co-chair. Laughlin, majoring in both psychology and religion and minoring in Asian studies, cautions that RAs "are not sent out into the college community to handle everything." Says Laughlin: "We're more of a resource"— pointing students toward the broad array of academic, social, and career services the college provides through the Sena Center for Student Life and Career Development and in other ways such as the Learning Skills Center directed by Beverly Askegaard. (For the resolutely practical, there are business-etiquette dinners — learn how to "work a room," order wine, and sort out all those forks — as well as briefings on occupations, and coaching on how to interview for jobs and land internships that could lead to careers.)

To encourage students to take advantage of what the college offers, RAs cultivate what Laughlin describes as "really an open atmosphere" in the residence halls. Students know they can drop in on RAs for advice or just an ear. "Everyone feels comfortable," says Laughlin, who, like other resident advisors, must preserve enough time for herself to pursue a typically heavy load of courses and activities.

Students' having options, when it comes to help, is important, says Keli Diewald '01, director of residence life. "Not everyone's going to love orientation," says Diewald, who was an orientation leader as a student. "Not everyone's going to love her RA." Overall, she says, "students need a comfortable environment in which to ask questions. They need a support network that includes RAs."

'What made Mary Baldwin work for me was the fact that you had traditions that really empower women. At first it might sound silly, like weekly teas that we had. At the same time, we were empowered to start new traditions, through the student Senate.'

The resident assistants need support, too. "They deal with all the human issues," observes Diane Kent, dean for student life and career development. "All the human issues of society are here." Added Greg Meek, associate dean: "RAs are the front line. Anything we deal with, they deal with — often first. That's probably true of all student leaders, including the Honor Council and the Judicial Board. They're all dealing with issues in a student-run system and as an extension of this office."

Sarah Gooch '04 of Richmond, Virginia, knows. She's president of the Student Government Association. Gooch marvels at not only the transition, but transformation, she has undergone since a first-year student. She credits friendships and not just those with student leaders.

"I was really shy when I came to college," recalls Gooch, and was not particularly close to her roommates that year. "That actually encouraged me to go meet the people on my hall. Everyone was so friendly and asked, 'What can we do for you? How can we help you?' It wasn't just the students whose roles were to help. The friends I made my freshman year — we live together now. We've been friends throughout our four years here. I think we'll remain friends the rest of our lives. They are my family. It was because of these people that I was able to grow and branch out and become less shy. It definitely changed my life."

Gooch has confidently addressed the Board of Trustees. The history major hopes to go to graduate school — in England. As she completes college, she is grateful to Kent for hearing her out on frequent visits to the student-life office. "There are days when I come to her office and sigh," says Gooch. "Student leaders are students, of course, and people as well."

Lanae Hawkins '06 of Hampton, Virginia, is an orientation leader for incoming freshmen. Orientation is a thorough, comprehensive process these days. Students learn how to become good students and good citizens of the Baldwin community. Hawkins, pursuing a computer information systems major and a business administration minor, could easily serve as inspiration for both. Her advice starts with urging students to fight the seemingly inevitable temptation to skip a class every now and then. One class could easily lead to another and suddenly, or so it could seem, a student is too far behind and disengaged to catch up.

"Some of my friends say, 'Oh, I'm not going to class today.' I haven't missed a class since I've been here. If I'm coming to college, why should I waste my time and money. College is expensive. What I tell people is, don't pick classes just because. Pick classes that will interest you. You've got to do the homework, and you don't want to be doing boring homework. Some students choose a class just because of the time slot or the day."

Hawkins researches courses and instructors before signing up. And she allows herself no outs, no excuses. "I push myself for myself." says Hawkins. Yes, she makes the Dean's List, but she doesn't crow about it.

Ranyne Herbert '00 remembers her freshman year as at least a little awkward. "My transition felt difficult my first year," she says. "The African-American population was small when I came here in 1996. It is different when you're the only person representing a certain racial group in a classroom. Whenever a racial issue comes up, everyone in the class turns toward you to be the spokesperson as though you're the only black person in America. The Office of African-American Affairs [now the Office of African-American Affairs and Multicultural Understanding] was a place I could turn to that was affirming, empowering, and embracing." Its director, now dean, Andrea Cornett-Scott, made her feel welcome and wanted. "But I also knew there were other staff members I could come to, like Diane, if I had problems."

Herbert, who earned a master's degree in divinity at Howard University after graduating, is career counselor at the Sena Center. She found her footing fast enough at MBC, starting the Anointed Voices of Praise gospel group and becoming president of the

'There are days when I come to her office and sigh.'

Black Student Alliance.

"What made Mary Baldwin work for me," she concludes, "was the fact that you had traditions that really empower women. At first it might sound silly, like weekly teas that we had. At the same time, we were empowered to start new traditions, through the student Senate."

Herbert also was reminded that professors, at a small college with small classes, notice who shows up. "If I were slipping, faculty members would call me and say, 'I didn't see you in class today.' If you weren't sick, they'd ask, 'What's going on?'"

The Sena Center was one of Herbert's first stops when she got to college. She knows career advice, early on, is important to many students today. "In career counseling, you see everybody, from freshmen to seniors. My purpose here is to help students find what their niche is." Her advice might surprise some.

"My generation has been so driven: 'When I grow up, I want to be...' We didn't focus on who we are now to get to where we want to be. But you use your life, in incremental steps, to reach that goal. Listening to students, I want them to appreciate where they are now — I want them to focus on being college students."

As transitions go, Brandy Tricia Caleb '03 had an especially big one when she left her native Guyana South America — the land of many waters, as she refers to it — to go to Mary Baldwin. She's something of a natural, however. Caleb was president of her freshman class and a student senator. She was involved in a variety of activities. Along with other Caribbean students, she started the Caribbean Student Association. Appropriately, Caleb is now director of freshman services. Think of her as part cheerleader, part guide, part nag.

Caleb views her job ambitiously. She approaches new students as soon as they pay their deposits. "After she deposits, she's all mine," says Caleb. "I help to equip and inform the future MBC student and her family." Sometimes that's not easy. First-generation college students, she says, may not know anyone who might help with what is a ritual, really, "involving students mentally, physically, emotionally, and spiritually."

During students' first semester, Caleb makes sure they know that the college is truly a community, one with traditions, standards. She wants them to understand "what it means to be a Mary Baldwin woman, a well-educated Mary Baldwin woman of the third millennium." She even asks them whether they are making friends and getting involved in campus life — and she checks up on how they're doing in class. Caleb works with students to draft a four-year academic plan "and become very familiar with the Student Handbook and the Academic Catalog."

By the second semester of freshman year, Caleb hopes to have all new students on a firm foundation, well versed in the ways of the college (including motto and hymn), and eager to "connect where they see fit and leave their mark."

Velma Carman '01 certainly did. "I started getting involved because I wanted to have a say in what events we were having on campus," she says. Involved she got: chair of the Residence Hall Association, junior class president, and a member of the student government Executive Committee. Carman reflected what many experts say is often key to a successful and satisfying time at college: "The more I got involved at MBC, the more I loved my experience. I loved being able to see the difference I was making on campus."

Carman is now director of student activities. And college may now be a career for her: "I realize that student affairs is a field that I find interesting, fun, and rewarding."

For all that Mary Baldwin College does to ease the transition into, through, and beyond college, the comprehensive effort is sometimes a reminder that fit remains important. As Herbert says, "Mary Baldwin has a lot to offer, but it's not for everyone."

Amplify that observation when it comes to student leadership, adds Kent: "Student leadership is about service more than power or ego. You come into this to gain something — certain knowledge and skills and experience. Everyone is invited to the table, but we have expectations about how you behave when you come to the table. We value everyone — all communities."

"The overriding tradition of the college is support and care," says Meek. "The students who fit best here are those who have the capacity to extend themselves, to support one another, to care about one another, to make sure they're having a good experience. They address problems when they see that another student is in trouble, helping that student get the assistance she needs. I think that's what keeps the culture of the college going."

MBC Advice: Soup to Nuts

In addition to the broad array of assistance it offers on academics and adjustment to college, Mary Baldwin provides the most practical of career advice: how to write a resume and cover letter, how to snare and prepare for an interview, how to assess job offers, how to anticipate the demands of etiquette at a business lunch, how to work a room at a social function, and how, if appropriate, to order wine in a restaurant.

More important, of course, is the college's help in choosing majors and minors, learning about careers and related skills and knowledge, matching occupations with interests and abilities, creating a meaningful plan not only for success in college but beyond — and relieving at least some of the stress of getting it all together.

How's This for Transition?

From Maui to the Valley, No High School in Between

By Lantana Hoke '04

Going away to college is perhaps the most challenging transition a person must make. New people, new housing, new food, new status, maybe even a new state — an entirely new life awaits the incoming freshman.

Beginning Mary Baldwin College was the most radical adjustment of my life. I grew up on Maui, in Hawaii, and suddenly found myself in a small southern city at a women's college. What a striking change! Not only was I flying across an ocean and a continent to attend school in a place I'd never been before, I was doing it four years before I ever thought I would.

Entering MBC's Program for the Exceptionally Gifted at age 14, I was excited and just a little scared about what awaited me. Dorms and roommates, classes and professors, papers and finals, the dining hall — I wasn't sure what to expect of Mary Baldwin and PEG. Although being a PEG is a unique experience, every PEG student is, above all, a Mary Baldwin College student.

But new PEGs, unlike other MBC students, have curfew, study hours, and required meetings with PEG staff. The PEG staff is very supportive. Though I've long since moved out of the PEG dorm, I often visit the staff.

I remember my first nervous entrance into a college classroom, an algebra course. I had no idea what to expect, but since that first 8 a.m. class, my confidence has grown with my education. My first semester included freshman PEG English (dubbed Peglish) and other small classes that featured lively discussion. These courses helped me adjust to college work and also expanded my interests. The diversity of the academic offerings appealed to me; I could (and do) take classes in environmental studies, children's literature, and anthropology. I also try to take advantage of fun classes, like yoga and guitar. Though choosing a major was difficult, I finally selected English because of my love of reading and writing.

Through close interaction and collaboration with my professors, advisors, and campus employers, I've built relationships that have enabled me to develop. Various work-study jobs I've held on campus have also enhanced my life at Mary Baldwin. Through my work tutoring at the campus writing center, I can instill in my classmates some of the confidence I've gained. By performing a service meant to help others improve their writing skills, my own have been sharpened.

Before I'd come to Staunton, I had never seen snow. My first winter, I enrolled in a Mary Baldwin physical education class, Intro to Snowboarding. I was actually getting credit to learn something I'd always wanted to do while bonding with the other MBC students in the class. I made fast friends as we conquered the bunny slopes at a nearby ski resort.

I've always been athletic, and I naturally gravitated toward athletics at Mary Baldwin. My freshman and sophomore years I played on the varsity soccer team. The camaraderie that comes with being on any team really helped me get to know other students. Sweating through practices, winning and losing games, and taking road trips in the MBC vans to New York allowed me to get to know my teammates well. Another major benefit of playing soccer was making friends with traditional students, sometimes difficult for PEG students because of the initial stay in the PEG dorm. Just going to the weight room on a Thursday night is a good excuse to hang out and talk to friends and classmates. Sports have played a major role in making my transition into Mary Baldwin smooth.

Staunton has enriched my life as well. For example, working at a lunch eatery downtown has allowed me to learn more about the community and given me valuable experience. On campus, I've also taken advantage of several opportunities Mary Baldwin offers to prepare myself for life after college, including the aptly named Senior Transitions program. The seminars cover everything from career and interview advice and writing cover letters and resumes to researching, selecting and applying to graduate schools.

'Mary Baldwin has prepared me to make the transition out of college as smoothly as I made the transition into it. Perhaps more important, it has taught me what I need to know to do well and succeed once I am no longer a Mary Baldwin student.'

When I pictured starting college, I didn't expect the little things to be most important in making life at Mary Baldwin colorful and fulfilling. Meeting a friend for lunch at the Pub, watching movies in Francis Auditorium, and going to watch friends perform in plays are just some of the ways I've made Mary Baldwin home. Concerts and poetry readings in the Nut House, the Mary Baldwin coffeehouse, have added texture and fun to my life at Mary Baldwin.

The various events Mary Baldwin offers also provide opportunities to get into the flow: getting dressed up for Halloween mixers, going to hall programs to make T-shirts and eat pizza, and enjoying Apple Day.

As a senior, I've become entirely situated and comfortable at MBC, but I know come May I'll have to make another transition into what they call the real world. Filling out graduate school applications with the help of my advisor and professors, performing job searches on the Internet with my roommate, and planning a trip to backpack around Europe this summer are just some of the things I've been doing to prepare. Though I'm not sure what I'll eventually do, Mary Baldwin has prepared me to make the transition out of college as smoothly as I made the transition into it. Perhaps more important, it has taught me what I need to know to do well and succeed once I am no longer a Mary Baldwin student.

faculty and staff highlights

He also gave a presentation on "Science and Religion Honors Colloquium" at the Virginia Honors Collegiate Honors Program fall directors meeting September 27. He joined fellow faculty members Rick Plant, Judy Klein, and Amy Diduch at the gathering at MBC.

Paul Ryan, associate professor of art, and James Sconyers, assistant professor of art, have been awarded $1,400 by the Extramural Associates Program of the National Institutes of Health's National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, to develop the concept for the 11@250 Project. The grant will go toward the cost of materials, supplies, and travel to develop plans and funding for a project, based in the visual arts, that explores issues of community, communication, and collaboration. The project is named for the intersection of U.S. routes 11 and 250 in Staunton. Ryan also reviewed the exhibition "Jae Ko: Ink and Paper" in the September/October issue of Art Papers Magazine.

Daniel Stuhlsatz, assistant professor of sociology, has been awarded $3,600 for pilot work on his project "Racial Parity of Educational Attainment in the 20th Century." The grant, from the Extramural Associates Program of the National Institutes of Health's National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, will pay the costs of a student research assistant and allow Stuhlsatz to write a proposal for funding.

Jacqui Elliott-Wonderley '93, dean of admissions and financial aid, is the new associate vice president of institutional advancement at Bridgewater College. Joining the Office of Admissions shortly after graduation, she became director of volunteers in the Alumnae/i Office in 1996, returned to admissions as associate dean in 1998, and later was named director of financial aid and dean of admissions and then dean for both. Applications and enrollment have set records in recent years, and the credentials of incoming students — including average GPAs and SATs — have steadily risen. Lisa Branson '98, assistant dean, is acting dean. Ashley Clark Buchanan '00 is now assistant director of admissions and financial aid. Among her expanded duties is overseeing recruitment of graduate and transfer students.

Creager New Director Of Grafton Library

Carol Creager has been named director of the Martha S. Grafton Library at Mary Baldwin College. Creager, who has been with the college for 10 years, had been acting director and was head of its public services and the library systems administrator.

Creager helped coordinate the library's transition from a card catalog to an automated system, created its electronic course-reserve system, developed an information literacy course, and established a student lab. She has a bachelor of arts from the College of William and Mary and a master of library science from the University of Maryland.

In the Swim: Jennifer Kukla '04 Is a Leader Wherever She Goes

By Lantana Hoke '04

'The second I found out we had a swim team here I knew I wanted to be a member of it.'

During swimming season in the winter, Jennifer Kukla '04 is in the water by 6 a.m. For most people, that would seem jarring. But Kukla, a captain of Mary Baldwin's swim team and a cadet in the college's Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership, is accustomed to the pre-dawn start.

"It's hard to get up that early if you don't love what you're doing," said Kukla of practice in the nearby Staunton YMCA pool. Her hard work pays off in the pool — Atlantic Women's College Conference all-conference team two years in a row — and in VWIL. As first captain, she's the top-ranking student, commanding the corps.

Kukla has been on the swim team since freshman year, and she's captained it since her sophomore year. "The second I found out we had a team here I knew I wanted to be a member of it," she said. Though her schedule is tight, Kukla still finds time to practice on her own in addition to team practices. "I have a membership and go to the Y and swim on my own to get more pool time," she said.

"I come from a family full of swimmers and lifeguards," said Kukla, from Richmond, Virginia. She started swimming seriously "as soon as I could swim a full length of the pool"— before she was old enough to go to school.

Kukla says MBC's swim team "is fun and team oriented. It's hard to slack off when I know that I will be letting teammates down." As a captain, Kukla said her experience "has taught me to really work with people — to learn their strengths and weaknesses and help them to improve."

Thanks to VWIL as well as swimming, Kukla acknowledges that "I have had a lot of leadership experience." Though she says she has always been driven, she said she "had to learn to nourish that drive in order to meet my goals."

Kukla plans to commission in the Marine Corps and undergo the basic training required of all new Marine officers.

Fall Sports Highlights

Field hockey, soccer and volleyball teams wrapped up their fall seasons with respectable records and top-four or higher finishes in end-of-season tournament play. Nearly a dozen athletes were chosen for all-conference recognition.

The Squirrels soccer and field hockey teams earned trips to the semifinal rounds of the Atlantic Women's Colleges Conference tournaments at the College of Notre Dame in November. The soccer team was defeated 5–0 by Chestnut Hill College to finish the season 9–8–3 and third in the conference tournament. The field hockey team lost to the College of Notre Dame 4–0 for a 6–7 overall record and a fourth-place finish in the tournament.

The volleyball team placed third in the AWCC tournament with a 14–14 record for the season.

Named to all-conference first teams were juniors Ashley Kizler and Brantley Scott for field hockey, freshmen Catherine Christian and Jessica Lankes for soccer, and senior Ebony Alexander and junior Ashley Ragland for volleyball. Junior field hockey player Kathleen Nevin earned a spot on the all-conference second team, and classmates Stephanie Hatlem and Eme Hurley received honorable mention, as did senior Karla Stewart for soccer.

Scott was ranked third in the AWCC in goals and points per game and fourth in overall points. She scored nine goals for 19 points during the season.

Brantley Scott

The cross-country team had a strong second year of competition. The team participated in four invitationals in addition to state and regional competitions. It finished its season with four runners qualifying for the NCAA Southeast Regionals in Atlanta: Jessica Leccadito '07, Kate Melson '05, Angie Pacheco '07 and Kelly Pecotte '06. Junior Jessica Nevins holds school records in the 5K and 6K distances and was ranked in the Top 30 in Virginia.

Top Soccer Coach

In just his first year of coaching the Fighting Squirrels soccer team, head coach Andrew Green was named the 2003 Atlantic Women's Colleges Conference Soccer Coach of the Year.

Andrew Green

After a difficult start against tough teams, Green said fourth place with a conference record of 5–2–3 "exceeded his expectations."

"If there's one thing I have to say about this award, it's that I couldn't have done it without Shep [Critzer], my assistant coach," Green said. Critzer's familiarity with some of the players' styles from working with them in previous seasons "got me up to speed," Green said.

The AWCC, NCAA Division III, is composed of eight women's colleges on the East Coast.

When Green was a trainer and assistant coach for Spring Valley High School in South Carolina, his team placed second in state competition. The competitive clubs he coached also took home several State Challenge Cups and often made it to the state finals.

This spring will be Green's first season leading the boys soccer team at Robert E. Lee High School in Staunton, where he is also a math teacher.

In 2002–03, Mary Baldwin's Michelle Lawrence was recognized as the AWCC volleyball coach of the year.

Long Road Trip a First

An early-season trip to Tampa, Florida, gave the college's basketball team a taste of how it feels to be a traveling sports squad.

Head coach Jackie Bryan said the mid-December excursion was the first time the basketball team traveled so far for regular-season competition. The team squeezed in visits to Disney World, Raymond James Stadium where the National Football League Tampa Bay Buccaneers play, and the International Mall.

"It was pretty interesting to play in the midst of the circumstances of travel and excitement," said Bryan. "It definitely makes me appreciate those teams that do it on a regular basis. It takes a lot to remain focused."

Although the results on the court were not all that the players hoped for, Bryan said the experience was worthwhile. The team raised money during fall semester to cover transportation and lodging.

The Squirrels lost 76–43 to Webber International University, a Division II team in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. Mary Baldwin was also defeated 97–53 in a scrimmage — a game that does not figure in its overall record — against Hillsborough Community College of Tampa.

GIFTS TO MARY BALDWIN COLLEGE :: 2002-03

The motivation to give to Mary Baldwin College is personal and as varied as the number of contributors — the hundreds of graduates and former students, parents, and friends whose names grace these pages. But they all share a goal: a Mary Baldwin College that is the best that it can be, now and in the future. A college that transforms the minds and lives of its students, engages accomplished and inspiring faculty, retains a highly competent, committed staff, and serves as a national model for excellence in education through signature programs and innovative tradition.

Mary Baldwin has long enjoyed wide respect, especially among higher-education experts and authorities. Bolstering its ranking as one of U.S. News & World Report's top-tier master's-level universities in the South is what the magazine calls "peer assessment" — the opinions of presidents, chief academic officers, and deans of admission at other colleges and universities.

When it comes to peer assessment, Mary Baldwin is something of an overachiever. We manage to score high in this key category, offsetting a small endowment and, as the accompanying chart shows, the modest percentage of alumnae/i who contribute to the Annual Fund.

Increasing the proportion of givers will do considerably more than help MBC rise in the rankings. Donors listed here know that their support is just as important to Mary Baldwin's future as it is to us now. Whatever the size of individual gifts, the percentage of alumnae/i who participate in annual giving matters.

As closely watched as some may be, rankings are not everything. But your support of Mary Baldwin is. The markets are going up again. Think of your contribution as an investment in the value of your degree, in the certainty that someone else will have the opportunity that you did.

Take a look at the charts on the page facing this one. Congratulate the classes with impressive percentages of givers. Take inspiration if yours is not among them. Scan the columns of donors on the following pages. If your name isn't there, please get in touch with Mary Baldwin. (And don't hesitate to give an MBC friend a nudge.) Giving is easy. You can do it online at www.mbc.edu (click on the cupola of Hunt Dining Hall at the bottom of the main page). Or call toll free: 1-800-622-4255.

Although it's not a lot of money, I believe that my yearly contributions help secure the continuing development of Mary Baldwin College. I hope that my example, following that of others, will prompt additional contributions. I want student life, both cultural and academic, to continue to be enhanced and modernized to meet the needs of today's students and prepare them for the challenges they will face as women and as leaders in this world. I want to help MBC stay competitive with other institutions.

This once-traditional women's college has grown and prospered, undertaking new programs while other women's colleges were closing. MBC provides an environment that encourages women to explore without judgment or fear of failure. I am committed to Mary Baldwin because it may be the only place where these women will have that opportunity.

Mary Baldwin gave me an incredible gift. My time there gave me the tools, confidence, and knowledge to become a creative and contributing member of society. I support MBC so that gift will continue to be passed on to other young women.

Mary Baldwin provided me with a liberal arts education that has given me choices. My varied career has fit together because of the things I learned at MBC: thinking for myself, writing, communicating, planning, team building, and taking things I learn along the way and applying them to different situations, including career, community work, family life and personal fulfillment. I am grateful for the confidence I gained there, the close relationships I had with faculty and staff, and the lifetime friendships I made. I feel strongly about the need for private, liberal arts education for women.

I also have supported the Mary Shuford Scholarship fund. Mary was my roommate and a beloved friend at MBC. She lives on through the many friends she had. At our 20th reunion, we remembered and celebrated her beautiful, charismatic spirit.

Why do I give to Mary Baldwin College? I believe in giving back to those who inspire, uplift, and provide direction to others. MBC was instrumental in providing the education, confidence, and spirit of empowerment that has taken me further in life than I ever thought possible. I know that if I had not worked through the challenges that MBC gave me to obtain my degree I would have settled for much less in life. I am honored to be able to provide some token of appreciation to such a fine institution as Mary Baldwin College.

I learned the definition of tenacity firsthand at MBC from August 1988 through August 1989. I finished 33 hours of credit in 12 months while holding a 25 hours-per-week job as a waitress, worked nights and attended school during the day. My focus was intense, and my goal was set on getting that degree. The Adult Degree Program made it all possible. I had to pay rent, and I had to study. Those were my two major guiding forces. I kept them in check, and I won the race!

Since graduation in 1990, I have held four different positions. Three of those were in the financial industry, and each one was a step up from the previous position. The last was as financial consultant for seven years with a major brokerage firm. It was challenging and fulfilling. The birth of my son two years ago led me to take a break from corporate America. When I am ready to return, I am confident that my MBC degree, years of business experience, and ability to work through great odds will land me right where I want to be.

It is a pleasure and an obligation to give back to the school that provides tools to hundreds of women every year that will make them highly marketable and successful in today's economy. To finish a bachelor's degree at MBC gives one the power to say 'I will not settle for less. I have learned to work hard for what I deserve. I am an MBC graduate!'

My devotion to my mother was my motivation in establishing the Marguerite Fulwiler Livy Scholarship award. She had an abiding love for Mary Baldwin, and it was my love for her that inspired me.

From early childhood, I remember Mamma speaking of her days at Mary Baldwin. It was in many ways a Camelot experience. After my father died, Mamma went back to teaching and then into administration. I felt we owed Mary Baldwin. The scholarship presented a most appropriate way of showing our appreciation.

DR. GRAHAM E. BEARD, SON OF WILHELMINA ESKRIDGE BEARD '30
THE WILHELMINA ESKRIDGE BEARD SCHOLARSHIP

The Wilhemina E. Beard Scholarship was awarded to me in my senior year at Mary Baldwin College. As a theatre major, I truly felt honored to be chosen for this named scholarship. I knew I was doing well academically, but I wanted to do better. This award helped me strive to achieve all I could as a student. The education that I received at MBC was more than I expected. I honestly believe I could not have gained the education I received from Baldwin anywhere else.

Jill Keagy '03 and Dr. Graham E. Beard

Meeting Mr. Beard at the annual Hot Chocolate Social for donors and recipients of named scholarships was wonderful. As I sat sipping hot chocolate, I heard stories of Mr. Beard's memory of his mother. I felt like I got to know her through his stories.

I am very thankful to have been chosen for such an outstanding named scholarship! My dreams were made reality at MBC, and I owe that in part to Mr. Beard and his generosity.

The Kiracofe Society

The Kiracofe Society is for deferred giving: charitable remainder trusts, charitable lead trusts, charitable gift annuities, life estates in real property, life insurance, or bequests. Gifts may be designated for certain uses or left for the college to decide what's best. Many donors direct their gifts to Mary Baldwin's endowment.

Do I give to Mary Baldwin College? You bet! I not only give to the Annual Fund, but I also have set up a trust fund that will benefit MBC upon my death. This is my way to thank MBC for giving me the education that lasts a lifetime.

I am proud of what Mary Baldwin College has become over the 51 years since my graduation. How can I not be proud of a school that established a highly successful program that trains women for leadership positions — the Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership? How can I not be proud of the innovative master's degree programs in teaching and in Shakespeare studies? How can I not be proud of the college's offering the best liberal arts education for women of all ages, from the Program for the Exceptionally Gifted to the Adult Degree Program? And how can I not be proud that I, in a small way, have been part of these accomplishments by contributing what I can to Mary Baldwin College?

MBC gave me the opportunity for a successful life, and now I enjoy returning the gift.

Some Secrets Are Not Best Kept

(Psst! Help Spread the Word About MBC)

There may be a college fair near you!

Mary Baldwin College receives hundreds of invitations to college fairs every year. Without the help of people like you, many young women throughout the United States would not have the opportunity to learn about what Mary Baldwin can offer them. Volunteers play a crucial part in admissions recruiting. We would love to have your help. If you are interested in attending a college fair on behalf of Mary Baldwin College, please let us know. The process is easy and lots of fun. The Office of Alumnae/i Activities will handle all of the paperwork and send you the materials. All you have to do is attend the fair and talk about how much you love your alma mater. Please contact Ryn Bruce '99, director of volunteers, at 1-800-763-7359 or rbruce@mbc.edu.

Alumnae/i Association President's Letter

Dear Friends,

As president of the association, I go to campus several times a year for meetings. During these trips, I sometimes build in extra days so that I can enjoy more of what Mary Baldwin offers. The college is such a welcoming and dynamic place.

As a lifelong learner and a retired professional educator, I look forward to attending classes. I review the academic catalog, an intriguing smorgasbord. I pick a course in one of the combined majors such as Health Care Administration or Marketing Communication, which were not available in my era. Then I select a course available during my college years that I didn't take. Finally, if time permits, I sample a class in my major, English.

Some things never change. I take notes along with the students (many of them use computers to do so) and make a list of recommended readings. In a marketing course, I joined students in an in-class project. What fun that was! A Mary Baldwin education is as challenging and exhilarating as ever.

An avid walker, I like to hike the campus's hills (yes, really!) and take in the remarkable vistas. During chilly predawn strolls, I have heard roll call as I come upon the VWIL Corps of Cadets preparing for morning activities. Late-afternoon walks sometimes include the track next to the Physical Activities Center, where intercollegiate teams practice. Dawn and dusk are particularly beautiful times in the valley, and the view from the lawn of the president's house is spectacular. Staunton's restored downtown, with shops and restaurants, is another terrific place to meander.

In my travels around the country, I have found that Mary Baldwin alumnae/i typically are lifelong learners. I have also heard from many of you that Mary Baldwin's impressive setting helped you make up your mind about where to go to college. Why not come back — to learn and reconnect?

Each June, the Women's Institute for Leadership Development invites women to focus on where they have been in life and where they want to go, whether personally or professionally or both. The intensive on-campus program — Sunday, June 20, through Thursday, June 24 — includes developing plans for health and fitness and just about everything else to make life more meaningful, fulfilling, and balanced.

I know. I was in WILD several years ago. (Many participants are alumnae.) With the help of caring, enlightened instructors and the other participants, I put together a comprehensive action plan that I have followed since. In WILD, I met fine women with interesting life stories. Some became close friends. To learn more about WILD, go to www.mbc.edu/wild.

Consider, too, periodic alumnae/i events such as the Continuing Education Experience on a recent weekend in March. The theme, reflected in a wide range of discussions led by MBC faculty and others, was "Recharge your Mind, Relax you Body, and Renew your Spirit."

I hope that in the near future you and your college friends will make plans to return to Staunton. The beauty of the campus and outstanding learning opportunities await you!

With warm regards,

Sue McDowell Whitlock '67

Do We Have Your Correct E-Mail Address?

You know — the latest, up-to-the-minute, current address. E-mail addresses change, people move around, businesses buy other businesses. We understand. But we want to stay in touch. The Office of Alumnae/i Activities sends out periodic updates about news and events at Mary Baldwin. So, please, help us help you. Make sure we use the e-mail address that you use. Send changes to alumnae@mbc.edu. And thanks!

class notes

VIRGINIA "GIN" MABEN Stokes of Farmville VA enjoyed attending a Blackstone High School reunion as the oldest graduate. She also celebrated the birth of great-grandson Alexander Garth Davis February 1, 2003. Alexander's paternal great-grandmother is ROSA LEE OTT Davis '33

1933

MARGARET KING Hardman Westcott of Cincinnati OH circumnavigated the British Isles and spent a Christmas in Baja CA and on the Sea of Cortez. She writes: "Living in our motor home and enjoying life on the road. We're in Florida for the winter and New Hampshire for the summer. We don't do cold anymore."

1934

JACQUELINE CRINKLEY Maddex of Harrisonburg VA writes: "My husband Jack and I celebrated our 64th anniversary, and I've turned 90 years old, praise the Lord. We have three great-grandchildren and are expecting three more, including twins!"

1936

NELLIE HANKINS Schmidt writes: "My dear husband Louis W. 'Ray' Schmidt died on Good Friday 2003. His ashes were buried at Hebron Presbyterian Church in Augusta County VA in October. I have a cottage in a nice retirement home in Savannah GA."

1938

RUTH ROSE GALEY Welliver of Columbia MO writes: "Though I'm legally blind from macular degeneration, I'm still cooking and getting around. On May 8, 2003, we lost our beloved middle daughter Carla Stone, 56, from a bloodstream infection."

BARBARA JOHNSON von Reis of Middleville MI writes: "For the past two years I have been blessed with five great-grandchildren. I have 12 grandchildren, ages 11 to 33."

SARAH LACY Miller and husband Gil moved into The Highlands at Sunnyside Retirement Community in Harrisonburg VA. She writes: "We are delighted! I hope to visit Dr. Martha Grafton very soon, in another part of this big campus."

ALICE MOORE Sisson continues to work part time as a clinical social worker. Alice and husband William live in Wrightsville Beach NC.

1939

HAZEL NELLE ASTIN Nelson of San Antonio TX writes: "My husband Sam died in January 2003. I'm doing okay, but it has been hard. One grandson is a major in the Army serving in Baghdad and another, a major in the Air Force, has returned from Afghanistan. I hope to attend the reunion in May."

JEAN YOUNG Hupman married Richard Hupman October 15, 2003, in Bridgewater VA, where they reside.

SALLY CHENEY Walker of San Antonio TX writes: "In April 2003, I exhibited my paintings at the Salon Mijangos. I will have an exhibition April 8 to June 5 at the Southwest School of Art and Craft. I've been named Artist of the Year 2004 by the San Antonio Art League Museum and will have a retrospective exhibition at the museum in September."

SARA FRANCES FERRELL Shay of Linthicum Heights MD stays busy with her family, friends and community. She writes: "I took an Elderhostel trip to San Francisco CA during Christmas and visited with my No. 1 grandson Don Rutledge, who serves in the Coast Guard and is stationed at Petaluma, 35 miles from San Francisco. Two birds with one stone!"

DALE PETERS Bryant of Hanover NH continues taking and teaching classes at the Institute for Lifelong Education at Dartmouth (ILEAD). She writes: "My third great-grandchild was born in 2003. I still swim and do deep water aerobics, lead book discussions, and travel. I went back to Mexico."

MARIE ULMER Wolfe of West Columbia SC moved last May to Laurel Crest, a Presbyterian retirement home. Husband Oliver died in May 2002. Marie writes: "I fixed Christmas bags for 31 family members to distribute after dessert on Christmas day. Children, spouses, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren were all together. I am blessed."

1942

SARA "SALLY" MACKEY Godehn of Hendersonville NC writes: "Nothing is new with me. I'm just getting older but enjoying every minute of life. Only one sad part — in April of 2002, I lost the love of my life, Don Godehn, whom I met when I was at MBC. He attended W&L and graduated in 1941."

1944

BETTY "COOKIE" COOKE Wood of Dallas TX is the grandmother of 16, with one married over the summer. She writes: "I'm active in the affairs and ministry of seniors and toddlers at our Presbyterian church (PCA). Praise the Lord for good health and activity."

MARGARET "PEGGY" CREEL Miniclier continues to make and exhibit miniatures. She writes: "We moved to Mount Dora FL and into a seniors gated community — really a smart move on our part. My husband John and his friend made over 1,000 racing cars for the Boggy Creek Gang --- the camp Paul Newman and General Schwartzkopf started for chronically and terminally ill children. We went on a 21-day cruise through the Panama Canal to Vancouver, Canada. I also just 'redid' the assisted living miniature suite. Fun!"

ANNE HANEKE McGough of Lima OH writes: "I live rather quietly in a condo but keep quite busy playing bridge, going to club meetings, and doing a little traveling. I see my family here in Lima and in Columbus."

KATHERINE KIVLIGHAN Carter of Fort Defiance VA writes: "Life has been good! I have 13 'grands' and am expecting a 'great.' I still play tennis and my daughter Bev Coffman is coaching the Mary Baldwin tennis team."

EVA VINES Eustler of Mechanicsville VA writes: "Since June, I've enjoyed getting to know Lori Criswell, an R.N. completing her degree in health care administration through Mary Baldwin's ADP. She was amazed at some of the pictures I showed her from my years at MBC (1940–1944). In those years, married students were enrolled for the first time. Dances were held for the first time in the old dining hall."

1945

MARGARET EARLE Baker of Bronxville NY writes: "Had a wonderful cruise from San Francisco CA through the Panama Canal that included stops in Mexico, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Curacao, Aruba and the Bahama Islands. I played duplicate bridge on the days at sea."

1946

CORNELIA ADAIR Green of Bristol TN says she has more great-grandchildren and lots of graduations to attend. She writes: "Two sets of twins and one set of triplets — all smart and beautiful, of course."

DIANA REDE Cabell '56 and KATHERINE "KIT" KIVLIGHAN Carter '44 hosted a going-away party for Dr. Cynthia H. Tyson last April. Pictured (l to r) are Diana, Dr. Tyson, and Kit.

A number of reunion participants from the Class of 1963 had a great time hiking together on May 14, 2003, several days before Homecoming weekend. Pictured at the summit of Hawksbill Mountain in Shenandoah National Park are (top row, l to r) SHEARER TROXELL Luck, SUE JORDAN Rodarte, CARYN FOGARTY Tebbe, LYNN BUTTS Preston, EMILY DETHLOFF Ryan, MINTA MCDIARMID Nixon, JULIA "LANE" WRIGHT Cochrane, BECKY CANNADAY Merchant, (front row, l to r) LINDA "LYNNE" FOBES Marion, DOROTHEA "HONEY" BESSIRE Morris, and SALLY DUPREE Bamett. Classmates who hiked but are not pictured were JANE COULBOURN Marshall, TERRY LEE Alexander, EMILY TYLER, JUDY LIPES Garst, GALE PALMER Penn, INGRID CARLSON, PAT FISHER McHold, and ANNE HOGSHEAD Aleman. Becky Merchant writes: "Pretty youthful group of 60-year-olds, wouldn't you say?"

JOYCE CRAIG Butterworth-Engler of Birmingham AL writes: "I married Paul Engler, a widower and old friend, August 11, 2003. My husband Ted Butterworth died in 1998."

JOAN MORAN Smith of Farmville NC reports that son David is still in Kiev, Ukraine, working as a missionary and teacher for The Navigators.

FRANCES WAGENER Tebbs of Vero Beach FL reports the death of husband Charles B. Tebbs June 9, 2003. Frances and Charles were married 56 years.

1947

GLORIA DUKE Trigg of Tampa FL writes: "I've had a bad year with chemo, but I'm getting along fine now. I visited my sister, MARY DUKE Blouin '49, in Maine this past summer."

1948

PAMELA BURNSIDE Gray of Hopewell VA writes: "We have a red Australian terrier named Rufus, who drives all over the states with us. He's been to almost all, and everyone loves him!"

DOROTHY "DOTTIE" HILL Jefferis of Charlotte NC writes: "Nothing earth shaking is new with me. I keep in touch with the 'old Hilltop crowd.' My son Jim, his wife Tonia, and grandchildren Sarah (driving and cheerleading) and George (plays everything with any ball) live in Raleigh. Son Bob and his wife Martha are fabulous and live in town. Daughter Kat and her husband Norman also live in town with T.J. Sykes, 1. Life is good. Y'all come!"

GWENDOLYN "GWEN" AUSTIN Brammer of Highlands NC writes: "It is good to remember the good years at MBC. Harold and I are in Florida for the winter, enjoying the weather and nice people. We now have three in L.A. 'in the business.' Daughter KAREN BRAMMER AUSTIN '72 and her daughter have a Sylvan Learning Center commercial, and our grandson Brendan (Leah's son) is creating music for major television shows. It's a terrific job, and I was so pleased to be offered something right here in Ilfracombe. I attended the European Catalogue and Mail Order Days conference and exhibition in London, hosted by our publisher and sister company, Synergy. It was a great opportunity to meet many of the people I communicate with on a fairly regular basis (and put on my 'glad rags' for the awards dinner at the Paragon Hotel). Daughter Caroline, 16, is in her first year of A-levels, hoping to be offered a place at the University of Bath to study psychology. That would please me so much, as I spent my junior year there. I play darts on my pub's ladies' team and enjoy Monday nights out with the girls. Finally getting my English driving license so I can travel a bit more. Hoping to get back to Staunton in August."

My Sister's Circle provides intensive mentoring to academically promising fifth-grade girls from disadvantaged neighborhoods in Baltimore. Professional female volunteers serve as academic tutors and personal mentors, committed to following the girls through middle school. Weekly meetings, book discussions and cultural events are just a few activities offered. Baltimore Magazine quotes elementary school principal Irma Johnson: "...while the city has many important remediation programs for kids who are performing below expectations, brighter students crave cultural and social enrichment. Through My Sister's Circle, these economically disadvantaged inner-city girls are attending the opera, going on hayrides, and visiting museums. They're being exposed to so many different activities they would never have a chance to do otherwise." The article also conveys the thoughts of Shaniqua Warfield, a sixth-grader at The Barclay School, about the program. "Shaniqua says she enjoys her Saturday visits with her mentor, Ava Sewell, who is 'like a friend' to her. They go to parks and playgrounds, or go to Sewell's house, bake and talk. 'It helps me sometimes to get out of the house and have fun,' says Shaniqua, who lives with her grandparents, one of whom is disabled. 'She listens to me. She doesn't boss me around.'"

Corrections

In the fall 2003 magazine, the name of the husband of Elizabeth "Liz" Trombley Saunders '97 was incorrect. It's Mark. Also incorrect in that magazine were the higher-education affiliations of Todd Louis Gifford, husband of Ginger Payton Gifford '01. He's a 2001 graduate of Hampden-Sidney College and attends the University of Richmond School of Law.

Brooklyn Beckons Myers '72 To Claim Place in Print

By Dawn Medley

Susan Myers '72 has found her niche.

The hip, glossy quarterly about Brooklyn, New York, she co-publishes burst onto the world of custom, specialized magazines — familiarly called "niche magazines" — last fall.

BKLYN magazine (pronounced "Brooklyn") draws its name from the subway abbreviation for the borough and its content from the cultural, culinary and other contemporary interests of Brooklyn's more than 2 million residents. Heart of Brooklyn, a group of six cultural organizations, sponsors the periodical.

For Myers, a native of Woodstock, Virginia, launching a magazine about part of the city she adopted as a second hometown 20 years ago was a culmination of the passion for writing, editing and publishing she started to develop with her first column in seventh grade.

"This is what I love to do," Myers said by phone from her office on West 27th Street in lower Manhattan. Her apartment, she said, is "a brisk 14-minute walk" away, uptown near Bryant Park.

"Custom publications are what many industries are moving to now," said Myers. "To be able to talk to people about very specific topics that speak directly to them and interest them is invaluable."

Myers grew up in a family in which one older sister, Betty Myers Kegley, became a professor at Mary Baldwin, and the other, Kathy Myers Faust '67, became a student. The college was a natural choice for her. But she did not labor in the shadow of her older siblings while on campus or after graduation.

"She has always been the creative one," said Faust, who lives in Raleigh, North Carolina.

Kegley, professor emerita of physical education and health, taught at Mary Baldwin for 38 years, through both of her sisters' stints at the college.

Today, Myers' individuality is evident in her signature collection of stylish hats. Myers quipped that she might be single-handedly supporting the hat-making industry.

"I think it started with my mother, who told us 'There is no excuse for a lady to leave the house without a hat and gloves, even if it's just to hang the wash,'" Myers said.

Serving as the editor in chief of Mary Baldwin's student newspaper, Campus Comments, honed Myers' editorial skills while she worked on her major in German. Myers applied her English and German to translating and editing telexes — an early version of the fax — for a NATO-related organization during more than two years in Munich, Germany.

"When she started her own business, we were a little surprised, but it really took off," Faust said, referring to the firm Underline Communications that Myers began in 2001 with BKLYN partner Susan Berman. About a year ago, Myers and Berman founded its sister company, Underline Magazines, which publishes BKLYN.

"I'm very impressed," Faust said about BKLYN. "It's a real magazine."

"This notion of having a company is a terrific realization for me, and a tremendous challenge," Myers said.

Before BKLYN's debut, Myers worked in sales and public relations for major hotel chains such as Marriott and Hyatt. She also edited hundreds of captions and blocks of text for the public exhibition portion of the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library as a member of the design firm Donovan and Green. Myers' longest-running client is American Express, for whom she began editing and publishing customer newsletters 19 years ago.

Myers and Berman, under the umbrella of Underline Communications, also create online newsletters for Verizon that target its customers with disabilities.

In the midst of the Brooklyn bustle, Myers regularly makes it to Mary Baldwin alumnae/i gatherings in New York City and back to Staunton for reunions.

"The thing that appealed to me then and now about Mary Baldwin is its devotion to liberal arts," she said.

"It never occurred to me not to go to a liberal arts college. In my opinion, life is a liberal art; mine is, anyway."

BKLYN Basics

- Title: BKLYN — the subway abbreviation for the borough
- Content: The Winter 2003 issue features an interview with author Phillip Lopate and an excerpt from his book Waterfront, an article about how Brooklyn rock musicians balance gigs and parenthood, and a four-page cultural calendar. The Spring 2004 magazine includes an interview with American Woman author Susan Choi and an essay she wrote for BKLYN, the Brooklyn Museum of Art's show titled Open House: Working in Brooklyn, Urban Gardening 101, and "hot new 'hoods."
- Availability Copies delivered free to 85,000 residences in central Brooklyn and lower Manhattan, with 15,000 available at Heart of Brooklyn institutions. Subscriptions outside the city are $15 yearly.
- Sponsor: Heart of Brooklyn, a consortium of the Brooklyn Museum of Art, Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Prospect Park Alliance, Prospect Park Zoo, Brooklyn Public Library and Brooklyn Children's Museum.
- Web site: www.bklynmagazine.com
- Says Susan Myers: "As a topic for a custom publication, Brooklyn is perfect. There is so much to cover and so many stories to tell. It's great."

Read all about it

Campus Comments has prompted plenty of comment on campus this year — for all the right reasons. Redesigned and refocused, thanks to its top editor and its chief designer, the paper has informed and engaged students as rarely before. Campus Comments, in its ninth decade and appearing every other week during the academic year, is truly a student production from start to finish, as the sometimes bleary-eyed staff knows all too well. To view this year's editions on the MBC Web site, go to www.mbc.edu/student and click on "Campus Comments" under "Publications" at lower left.

Samantha Sprole '06, editor in chief

From Duxbury, Massachusetts, she came to Mary Baldwin through the Program for the Exceptionally Gifted and was one of the youngest college newspaper editors in the country when chosen at age 16.

Editor in chief appealed to me as a student interested in writing, developing leadership skills, and connecting with people on a professional level. I've felt that journalism is an integral facet of our society as well as an exciting and fulfilling job opportunity. From the first student publication and journalism conventions that I attended as a high school student, I've maintained a love for newspapers and the work involved in producing them.

I've learned a lot working for Campus Comments, and I look forward to the challenges. I'm thankful for all the advice and support from the newspaper staff and faculty advisors; they're helping me grow as a leader, coordinator and person. The lessons are invaluable.

Through Campus Comments, students are encouraged to connect with one another and their community in a meaningful way. By informing our fellow students, we are learning ourselves and experimenting with ideas and practices that will help us in later years. Conversations between newspaper staff and the rest of the Mary Baldwin community make each issue better than the last.

Theresa Rollison '04, art director

From Woodbridge, Virginia, she made redesign of Campus Comments her senior project and has earned distinction in her major, art.

As a freshman, I knew I wanted to major in Graphic Design. I was always on the look out for a really impressive senior project. Eventually, I decided to make my contribution to the college community by redesigning our campus newspaper and laying out each issue.

Changing the paper's format from tabloid to newsletter meant it could be produced inexpensively and more frequently — and on campus. It also could be posted on the college Web site.

I sought to create a stronger and more contemporary identity for the paper, one that would speak to the student body. I didn't want the paper to be ignored. The editors and I standardized the organization of articles and other information. We established sections and design elements that students could expect to see week to week.

Initially, students had mixed responses to the new look. It was a big departure. But as the first semester progressed, their reaction was largely positive, and readership increased dramatically.

Let it snow, let it snow — and it did and did

The Shenandoah Valley had another snowy winter, dressing up our landmark architecture, including the renovated President's House in the large photo above. Everyone seems readier than ever for May Term and the campus glories of lush lawns, graceful trees, and blooming plants of all sorts. Can Commencement and Homecoming be far off?
